TESTIMONIAL

Computer CORE's adult students, out of necessity, are experts in doing a lot with a little. They have been the caregivers to children and parents. Their low wages at one or more jobs supports whole families. They never thought about their own path. They thought tech was not for them.

As women, immigrants, or adults in their 40s and 50s they thought jobs with technological skills were out of their reach. But where does that leave them in a world where 92% of jobs require digital skills? (National Skills Coalition)

Once at CORE, students develop basic technical skills but also the confidence to proclaim, "It's My Turn!"

Computer CORE provides a place where they can feel smart and strong and finally take their place in the digital world. CORE students are jobseekers but are also looking for their path to opportunity.

CORE is that bridge to help people cross the digital divide and gain access to opportunity by giving them the technical skills, computers, and especially the confidence they need to find, and follow their path.
